ARREST WESTERN UNION SPY— TELEGRAPHERS REJOICE

Members of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union are rejoicing over the arrest of Frank Butterfield, alias Busch, a spy in the employ of the Western Union Company, who was picked up in Memphis, Tenn., on a charge of having rifled a suitcase belonging to an official of the union.

The suitcase, which was the property of S. J. Konnenkamp, international president of the union, was stolen from the LaSalle street station while the union man was on his way to the East.

It contained very important papers bearing on the union's trouble with the Western Union.

HAD THE HABIT

Sister—You're a naughty boy! You've been nibbling those lady-fingers I left on the table, haven't you?

Brother—No-o-o! I jest bit the finger nails a little, that's all.
